

Cooperative Learning Strategies

3 sessions– Thursday afternoons from 4:00-6:00 pm

As we prepare students to be life-long learners, the skill of working in a team is critical. Far too often, tasks are now solved by networking ideas and working in a think-tank. This is why understanding the importance of "Cooperative Learning" is critical for teachers and why it must be taught and used by students. Join us as we look to tackle the following questions:

1. Why is group work called cooperative learning?
2. What formats can cooperative learning take?
3. What are the risks and rewards a teacher and class will experience?
4. How can I incorporate this into my lessons?
